EDUCATIONAL OBJECTIVES

Northwestern Polytechnical University International Foundation program is committed to training international students in four aspects:

- 1. Academic basic skills: through preparatory study, the students can transcend the differences between their own countries and China's basic education and improve their subject knowledge structure.
- 2. Language application ability: through learning Chinese in an academic environment, the students can master enough professional Chinese vocabulary.
- 3. Career competitiveness: through preparatory study, the students will have a clearer self-awareness and become more competitive as China Hands and global people in the future workplace.
- 4. Cultural adaptability: through the study of Chinese culture, the students can understand Chinese academic culture, seek common ground while reserving differences across cultures, and better integrate and adapt to the cultures of various countries.

It is intended to help international students who intend to receive undergraduate education in China to improve their Chinese proficiency, professional basic knowledge and cross-cultural adaptability, and lay a solid foundation for future university studies.
